

Christos Giannakopoulos is Research Director at the National Observatory of Athens. His research focuses on climate change modeling of extremes and impacts on various sectors such as energy demand, health, agriculture, tourism, forest fires. He is the IPCC National Focal Point for Greece. He is Principal Investigator in several major climate change related EU projects, and has co-authored the national adaptation strategy for Greece. He is the author of over 90 peer-reviewed papers and over 100 publications in conference proceedings.

.